Rs1tr tribal uplift package in the works

Afridi says Roshan Qabail initiative to improve infrastructure, develop human resources, create jobs

Bureau Report

PESHAWAR: Khyber Pakhtunkhwa Chief Minister Sohail Afridi on Wednesday said that his government was working on a Rs1 trillion Roshan Qabail development package for the merged tribal districts of the province.

He said this during a meeting called to finalise the framework of the Roshan Qabail development package, according to an official statement.

It added that the participants reviewed the proposed framework and priority sectors aimed at ensuring sustainable socio-economic development of tribal districts.

Officials told the meeting that under the proposed package, significant investments would be made in six thematic areas for the development of tribal districts.

They said the development package would be worth Rs1 trillion.

The chief minister said that under the package, the special focus would be placed on improving infrastructure, developing human resources, and creating employment opportunities so that the merged districts can be brought at par with other developed areas of the province.

He said that the establishment of Tribal Medical College, Institute of Modern Sciences, and Safe city projects be included in the package.

Mr Afridi also said that the establishment of district and tehsil headquarters hospitals should be made part of the package in areas where such facilities didn't exist.

He said that a modern sports complex should be established in each merged district and a sports ground at the tehsil level to provide healthy recreational opportunities for youth.

The chief minister issued instructions to include markets as well as internal and external entry routes of the merged districts in the Safe City Project along with shifting of markets, schools and health facilities to solar energy.

He said that a Rescue 1122 station, orphanages and shelter homes should be included in the development plan for every tehsil across the merged districts.

Mr Afridi emphasised the need for increasing the share of investment in the health and education sectors, stating that sustainable development is not possible without substantial improvement in these areas.

He also ordered enhancement of allocations for science, technology, information technology, irrigation, social welfare, sports and energy sectors.

Officials said that special investments would be made under the package to enhance institutional capacity, improve governance and ensure effective service delivery. They also said cross-sectoral reforms would be undertaken to achieve inclusive development with particular strengthening of the health and education sectors.

The officials said under the development package, 1,245 new primary schools would be established in the merged tribal districts, while 463 primary schools and 85 middle schools would be upgraded.

They also said 975 primary schools, 240 middle schools and 125 high schools would be rehabilitated.

The officials said the proposed package also included the recruitment of 11,500 teachers and the provision of various educational scholarships.

They said rehabilitation and functionalisation of health facilities were also planned along with the establishment of telemedicine centers in district headquarters hospitals.

The officials said the proposed development package also covered construction of road infrastructure, development of check dams and irrigation infrastructure, provision of clean drinking water, establishment of industrial infrastructure and solarisation of schools, health facilities, and markets in the merged tribal districts.

They also said various initiatives had been proposed in the sectors of agriculture and livestock, forestry, sports and youth affairs, while measures would be undertaken in the sectors of local government, relief science and technology.

Peshawar burn centre records 66pc spike in cases last year

Prof Tahmeed urges govt to initiate scheme for prevention of burn injuries

By Ashfaq Yusufzai

PESHAWAR: Amid 66 per cent upswing in admissions since its establishment in 2018, the public sector Burns and Plastic Surgery Centre has urged government to initiate a programme to prevent burn injuries, which usually surge in winter season and affect mostly children and women.

The sole dedicated centre for treatment of burn injuries has also received 114 patients from neighbouring Afghanistan where health services for such patients are almost non-existent.

Speaking about the last year's performance of the centre, its director Prof Tahmeedullah told this scribe that there was a record-breaking patients' inflow, warranting a strategic shift towards provincial-level burn prevention programme. As usually, the centre received more patients with burn injuries that could have been avoided through putting in place preventive measures, including awareness, he said.

"The 120-bed tertiary care facility managed unprecedented 44,877 patients and operated on 9,338 of them last year. Given the soaring patients' volume, we need to maintain our clinical excellence for which we require more specialists and resources," he said.

Prof Tahmeed said that the number of patients visiting OPD was recorded at 13,881 while 1,808 were hospitalised, showing an upward trend of 66 per cent. The need for expansion of services was felt desperately with every passing day to manage patients, requiring specialised trauma and reconstructive treatment, more effectively, he added.

He said that the number of plastic surgery performed at the centre was 3,104, followed by trauma's 2,831 and burns' 2,535. "In response to the rising casualty rates, BPSC is spearheading systemic reforms. Efforts are afoot to establish a 'provincial burn registry' to ensure proper record of patients on the basis of which policies and strategies can be devised leading to improved care," he said.

Prof Tahmeed said that a formal request in that regard had already been submitted to government to establish a registry and launch a comprehensive provincial burn prevention programme.

He said that an estimated 1.5 million people suffered from burn injuries countrywide annually with 10 per cent of them happened to be life-threatening, requiring hospitalisation.

He added that about 15 to 20 per cent victims got crippled and underwent multiple surgeries and prolonged rehabilitation.

"Of these, 70 per cent are in most productive age group of 15 to 40 years while 80 per cent belong to poor socioeconomic strata, mainly due to illiteracy, poverty and low level safety consciousness," said Prof Tahmeed. He added that most of those mishaps were preventable through awareness and putting in place a legal framework.

He said that the centre achieved the highest ratio of passing candidates in plastic surgery examinations in the region in addition to procurement of advanced technology, including a Near-Infrared ICG Camera for lymphedema and an 'electric surgical piezo drill' within a budgetary allocation of Rs898.091 million.

He said that BPSC also expanded its super-microvascular and lymphedema services, marking a major advancement in provincial healthcare capabilities.

Prof Tahmeed, who is also president Pakistan Association of Plastic Surgeons, said that the centre was receiving delegates of many countries who were showing immense interest regarding management of terrorism-hit patients.

"We get people with more burn injuries caused by leakage of gas and eruption of fire in factories that cause injuries to hundreds of people. Collaboration with other countries would benefit local patients requiring high specialised services," he said.

He said that the centre was closely working with health department to upgrade plastic surgery services at district level and ensure rapid management of patients locally to reduce burden on BPSC.

Court suspends termination of reverend by bishop

Bureau Report

PESHAWAR: A local court has temporarily suspended an order of the bishop of Peshawar about termination of a reverend of an old church here, who claimed due process was not followed before issuance of the same.

Civil Judge Ihtishamul Haq observed that perusal of the record revealed that tentatively an arguable case existed in favour of the plaintiff, Reverend Shehzad Murad, a vicar of All Saints Church, Peshawar, therefore interim injunction was granted to him to the extent of suspension of two impugned orders of Oct 28, 2025, and Dec 15, 2025, till Jan 10, next date of hearing.

The court directed its bailiff to visit the spot of the suit property and make complete report along with digital photographs on the date fixed.

The court also issued notices to defendants including Bishop of Peshawar Humphrey Sarfaraz Peter, vice-chairman of an inquiry committee of Diocese of Peshawar, Reverend Rafiq Javed, deputy superintendent of police and SHO of Khan Raziq Shaheed police station, in whose jurisdiction the said church is situated.

The court sought their response to the suit filed by the plaintiff, challenging his suspension as well as termination from the post of reverend.

The plaintiff sought directives of the court under Section 30 of Specific Relief Act for the bishop to withdraw the suspension letter of Oct 28 and his termination letter of Dec 15 and allow him to perform his duty at All Saints Church, Peshawar.

Advocate Niaz Wali Khan appeared for the plaintiff and said that after getting qualified and ordained for spiritual duties, the deacons getting additional spiritual qualification, got the status of 'reverend' and thereafter, being placed in churches per rules framed under the Constitution of Church of Pakistan.

He stated that Church of Pakistan consisted of eight 'diocesan councils'. He said that Church of Pakistan had a dominant status which controlled the synod, which thereafter had control upon 'diocesan councils of the country'.

He stated that a bishop was a head of a diocesan council, who was elected for a specified period through the votes cast by the members of the synod, executive committee and the members nominated of diocesan council, which made electoral college.

The counsel stated that his client after having qualified pre-requisites and was being educated for the purpose of getting the status of reverend, was entrusted administration of All Saints Church in Kohati, Peshawar.
